VARIOUS PHASES OF THE CAMPAIGN AGAINST LAW AND ORDER.

MURDER AND ROBBERY ON THE CONTINENT-CONVICTIONS OF ANARCHISTS IN LONDON -THE ENGLISH STRIKES-THEIR IN-JURY TO INDUSTRY AND THEIR MENACE TO SOCIAL ORDER. THY CABLE TO THE TRIBUNET

copyright; 1892; By The Tribune Association, London, April 9 .- Interesting news from the Anarchists has been pouring in all the week, from Smin, from France, from Germany, from Poland, from England. Some of it relates to Anarchy and Anarchists in their simplest form; some of it to their first cousins, who for the present are content to be known as Socialists. The two are so mixed up in Spain that to distinguish between them is not always easy. In Xeres they were more Socialist than Anarchist; in Madrid they are more anarchist than Socialist, perhaps because they are foreigners. It is not easy to see why a Frenchman and a Portuguese should feel themselves called upon to regenerate Spanish society by blowing up the Chamber of Deputies. But the missionaries of Anarchy are as free from the narrow prejudices of patriotism as a New-York Mugwump. Their enterprise, as they are always telling us, is international, or cosmopolitan. Delboche and Ferriera are but outposts in the great European army of dynamite. The explosion in Madrid, had it only come off, would have been the echo of that in the Rue de Clichy, in Paris, which was in fact echoed in Angers on Tuesday.

The enemy attacked is everywhere an officer of the law, or a maker of law. It is in Spain the legislator, in Paris the public prosecutor, and the political authorities in general in Berlin. The French are said to make a sort of a hero out of The English are less given to heroworship of that particular kind. They have tried the little gang of scoundrels known as the Walsall Anarchists, acquitted two, who abroad would certainly not have been acquitted, convicted four and sentenced one of the four to five and the others to ten years' penal servitude. who got off with five, was recommended to mercy by the jury, partly because he confessed, and partly because he had "a good character," which most people would think a good reason for doub ling his sentence. Here, as abroad, it is the old story of bombs and pamphlets, a choice assortment of the instruments and literature of disorder. The Government thought the prosecution important enough to require the services of the Attorney-General. The Berlin police believe they have broken up the Anarchist gang in that city, which was never more than 100 strong, they say ; and perhaps they are right. It may be the dispersal of these people, the expulsions from Paris and Berlin, which account for the news of outrages, or preparations for outrages, from so many parts at once; from Ancona, Liege, Donai, Barcelons, and elsewhere. The press cries out for international legislation against international Anarchy. They are enemies of the human race Let them be treated as such. A practical application of this doctrine and the good results of it may be seen in the prompt justice done on the assassins of Count Poninski at Koscielee, in Prussian Poland. The Executive Committee of the Polish Anarchists wanted funds and sent four armed men to get them from Count Poninski. Upon his refusal they shot him, it is thought not to death. His brother and four friends rode after the Anarchists, overtook them, and killed two. Two more shot themselves, and the law officers are saved further trouble. reads as if it had happened in the far West, except that the English abstoin from preaching about There seems to be some doubt whether these Polish Anarchists were Anarchists proper or common robbers and murderers. The distinction is worth dwelling on.

Another branch of the Socialist movement may be studied in England. It is less violent and destructive in its aims, but still violent, and if it does not menace society as a whole, menaces the industry on which social prosperity depends The strike on a great scale is the form of protest which the English workingman thinks best suited to further his present purposes. The miners' proceedings in Darham and the engineers' strike in Northumberland excite far less interest than those in Yorkshire, which came to a speedy and ridicu-Yet the Durham miners are showing some stubbornness, and doing much harm to themselves and to the community. The engineers' strike on the Type and Wear also continues, and between them they have reduced the two great counties of Durham and Northumberland to dire

"Never," says a competent observer, "in the history of trade and industry in the North, has there been so grave a crisis." There could not be a mere convincing proof of it than the fact that every single berth in the Tyne is occupied by a vessel laid up in idleness. There are ominous rumors of great failures. Firms of European reputation are described as in jeopardy. If the miners and engineers only hold out long enough, they may see the whole commercial and industrial fabric or which they and so many others depend come tumbling about their ears. They will have had the satisfaction of ruining their employers, and an opportunity of determining for themselves whether labor without capital is likely to have a good time

The engineers' strike has now lasted nearly nine weeks. It started with a trumpery dispute, whether a certain class of work should be given to engineers or to plumbers. It is officially stated that this very work had been refused no long time ago by the engineers as too trivial. The arbitration court gave it to the plumbers, and the engineers struck against the arbitrators' decision. That is but one of many instances in which English workingmen have refused to abide by decisions to which they stood pledged in advance. Not less than 20,000 men are absent from work on this account. Not less than 200,000 altogether are out, counting the miners in Durham and Cleveland.

Of course there is widespread suffering. There would be were the men getting full strike pay, but it is reckoned that for the Durham miners alone full strike pay would require at least $200,000 a week. The sum actually available from trade union funds is about one-eighth of The Amalgamated Society of Engineers is one of the most powerful bodies in the Kingdom. The Durham miners, however, stand alone. They make no part of the great Yorkshire federation which lately called out 300,000 men in a freak, and at the end of a week sent them back again. both cases like causes produce like effects. The power in the hands of irresponsible officials is enormous, and is used as recklessly as power without responsibility always is. The men may suffer, the community may suffer, the whole industrial future of the members of the union may be mortgaged, but the dignity of the officials must be maintained, and their authority asserted at any cost. These gentlemen think it no part of their duty preserve order. They thrive by disorder. ng but the most energetic use of the police and of troops has saved Durham from riot and pillage. The most determined efforts are still made by the men on strike to prevent the working of the engines by which the pits are kept from being flooded. The engines are kept going by officials and clerks. If they stop, the livelihood of the strikers is gone. But passion has got the opper hand, and appeals to prudence and commonense are vain. On neither side is there any sign of yielding. The men are in the temper we see. As for the colliery owners, they have published a statement to the effect that to pay the wages demanded by the men means ruin to the owners, and that the longer the men stay out, the greater will be the reduction to which they must ultimately submit. The only reply the men have, or only one they make, is that the owners' figures cooked. The owners have offered to submit their books to examination, but the men declined that offer.

Violence and threats of violence have been Mr. Wharton, Chairman of Quarter Sessions, to the Grand Jury at Durham. There had been at the beginning, said Mr. Wharton, spasmodic outbreaks of violence. These were numerous, but the occasions were chosen with judgment. That and enterprise, impelled by fine ambition and par is, violence was attempted when the force of police was represented by a unit. In those circumstances there were few arrests. Since then intention has always been that the new thing should also the display of force has been great enough to be good. In the steadfast pursuance of this discourage the brutalities which some of the policy the actor has not only gained a brilliant reputastrikers threatened and practised. The miners tion, but has made himself a power in the dramatic life of the forces of law and order. Here, as elsewhere, they rely on intimidation. It is an depends on the freedom of the organized unions to terrorize workmen who do not belong to unions and to prevent them from working. Sometimes it is the employer who has to be terrorized. The policy of the strikers and of the union officials is stated with cynical frankness. It is even pressed stated in the House of Commons. The latest verpresence in the House is so useful. He was himself a coal-miner, and married, as he proudly relates, the daughter of a coal-miner. He is, or was, treasurer of the Miners' Association. On Thursday he wanted to know why extra police were drafted into the county, and whether the Home Secretary "did not think that those drafts of police, which were a source of great irritation, ought to be sent home." We have heard of this irritation theory before now. The Home Secretary contented himself with saying that responsibility for keeping the peace rests with the chief constable and local magistrates, and he could not interfere with their discretion. It is lucky for the soldier in Angers; the police in Poland, a Durham that its chief constable and magistrates elerical official in England, again the soldier and take different views of duty from those which governed the City of London police during the The Home Secretary's answer is Pavachol, the more so now that his guilt is sufficient for the present occasion, but his policy may at any moment end in disaster. MR. MANSFIELD'S FAREWELL

Last night in the Garden Theatre Mr. Mansfield serious enough to call forth a strong charge from speared in selected scenes from several of his plays Mr. Wharton, Chairman of Quarter Sessions to and so concluded his present season in New-York. It is not yet quite ten years since that young actor startled the stage by his remarkable embodiment of Baron Chevrial, in "A Parisian Romance," and since that time his career has been one of incessant alivity and their friends are impatient at the presence of these times. He has had his reverses of fortune, but, also, he has had his triumphs; and, whether in defeat or victory, he is incessantly a picture-sque figure avowed principle of the modern strike that success and an object of public interest. His long season at the Garden Theatre has been signalized by the produc tion of "Ten Thousand a Year" and by the revival of "Nero." Other pieces have been presented, and every effort has been made to deserve, as well as to win, the public sympathy and favor. The farewell greeting that was given to Mr. Mansfield last night exwith hearty kindness the esteem in which he is held and the appreciation with which sion of it comes from Mr. Wilson, of Durham. He his labors have been regarded. People who like is one of those representatives of labor whose trash at the theatre are not interested in this actor. He has no message for them and he does not address them. But for the intellectual public his progress upon the stage means an ever-increasing benefit and pleasure. His transitions from character to character denoted the remarkable versatility and scope of his talents and were significant of his patient endurance and unflagding energy. He was observed with delighted attention and often londly applanded; and he took his present leave of New York in a speech full of feeling and expressive of undaanted purpose. Mr. Mansfield departs to-day for San Francisco, where he will begin the senson at Easter.

HAEVARD "GRADS" AND "UNDEEGRADS" MEET There was a re-union of wearers of the crimson of Fol. Harvard at the Harvard Club, in West Twenty of joility and good-fellowship such as reigns at th ng, which took the form of a reception to the mem bers of the Hasty Pudding Club and of the 'varsit nine who were in the city. It was a rare occasion for seldom are so many undergraduates in the city there were last night. The young men had every reason to feel proud, too, for the Pudding men had just finished a highly successful engagement in their comic opera, "The Sphinx, or Love at Random," at the Manhattan Athletic Club Theatre, and the place had in the afternoon won a fine victory on the ball field. The "undergrads" were most heartly therefore, and they thoroughly enjoyed meeting the older men, many of whom have left footprints of the sands of Harvard in the shape of athletic and other achievements.

The meeting did not begin until late, been were elected: Resident, John W. Taylor, '66 Charles D. Wetmore, '80; William Campbell, L. S. '90; W. J. Farquher, '91; non-resident, H. H. Hunnewell, fr., '90; Wyman K. Ffint, '91; George F. Richardson, '50; Frederic Morton Crehore, 'e1, and Ralph A. Kellogg, '88,

After the meeting old college songs were sung and old college stories were retold, and best wishes for success in the games with Yale and Princeton were showered on the voming men who represent Harvard on the ball field this spring.

DR. MAYNARD AT THE LOTOS CLUB.

A number of members of the Lotos Club and their invited guests were entertained last evening by the Rev. Dr. Newland Maynard with an interesting lecture n "The Highlands and Lowlands of Scotland," The istory, legends and scenery of Scotland furnished the peaker an abundance of typics of uncommon charm, and he made the best use of them. He began with a sketch of some of the leading occurrences in Scotch istory, and then described Edinburgh Castle and Edin burgh town. Next he told of Mary, Queen of Scots, and of the places in which various incidents of her life occurred. Sir Walter Scott, John Knox and Rob ert Burns were touched on, and pictures were shown of spots hallowed by memories of them.

The stereopticon views were much enjoyed. Supper was served after the lecture. Among those present were Dr. Charles Insice Parice, William Leary, R.
